

Mershon Center affiliated faculty gather before Peter Shane's presentation about his forthcoming book Madison's Nightmare: How Executive Power Threatens American Democracy (University of Chicago Press) on January 21, 2009.

(Left to right) Richard Gunther, Professor of Political Science, talks with Margaret Mills, Professor of Near Eastern Languages and Cultures, and Geoffrey Parker, Andreas Dorpalen Professor of History, before Peter Shane's presentation on January 21, 2009.

Matthew Fehrs (left), Postdoctoral Fellow at the Mershon Center, talks with Alex Wendt, Ralph D. Mershon Professor of International Security, on January 21, 2009, at the Mershon Center.

Peter Shane (left), Jacob E. Davis and Jacob E. Davis II Chair in Law, talks with Rick Herrmann, Director of the Mershon Center, before giving a presentation about his forthcoming book Madison's Nightmare: How Executive Power Threatens American Democracy.

Mershon Center faculty listen as Peter Shane (front right) gives a presentation about his forthcoming book Madison's Nightmare: How Executive Power Threatens American Democracy. Shane particularly discussed the role of presidential signing statements in the Bush administration.

Peter Shane, Jacob E. Davis and Jacob E. Davis II Chair in Law, talks with Mershon affiliates (left to right) Carole Fink, History; Bruce Weinberg, Economics; and Holger Nehring, Visiting Scholar from Sheffield University.